Mr. Ajit Pai, FCC Chairman
445 12th Street SW,
Washington, DC 20554

Dear Chairman Pai,

My name is Connor Price and I'm a middle school student who uses the Internet frequently. I use the Internet at home to communicate with my classmates on projects, talk to friends across the world and use it to get a better idea of the world around me. Bringing this new rulemaking into effect will make American Citizen pay more for the same speeds that they have now.

I'm writing to oppose the new proposed rulemaking of "Restoring Internet Freedom" because I think that all data should be treated the same just as all people are treated equally. This new proposal will only benefit the ISPs and not the consumers. Some of the websites people use all the time will be slowed down if this new proposal is put into law, and that is not okay.

If this rulemaking occurs It will slow down people's internet browsing, make people pay more for the same internet and ruin the average experience online.

Sincerely,

Connor Price
